STATEMENT ON THE RESIGNATION OF THE DEPUTY VICE-CHANCELLOR: PEOPLE AND OPERATIONS

Our life is a constant search for harmony between or among many, and often, competing interests. To some, this search is simply between wealth and happiness. To others it is a combination of career and lifestyle. It could be many things to others. The choices we make in search of this harmony have an impact on people we live and work with, more importantly, family.

It is in this context that I, with regret, have to announce the resignation of Professor Khehla Ndlovu, effective, 1 December 2017. He has had to make a choice involving the most optimal combination of work and family life. This has sadly seen him accepting a position at the University of South Africa. Though not so much different from his current position at DUT, this job affords him, among others, the opportunity to work and live with his family in the Gauteng province.

Professor Ndlovu's stay with DUT has been quite short; yet, gainful and impactful. In his brief sojourn with us, he has piloted a number of projects that support the strategic vision of the University. With deep conviction, I am confident to declare that Professor Ndlovu is (or soon to be was) among our right people in their right seats and playing their right roles in our quest to move DUT from good to great.

While on the one hand we are sad to see Prof Ndlovu leave, on the other hand, we are happy to have known him and had him amongst us. I have no doubt that he will remain DUT's friend. Will you join me in wishing Professor Ndlovu well in his future endeavours?
